

Tolerance

How might the word “tolerance” be defined?

- 1) Merriam-Webster: “sympathy or indulgence for beliefs or practices differing from or conflicting with one’s own”
- 2) As our culture may define it: tolerance = agreeing on a point of view or belief. Disagreement is often viewed as intolerance.
- 3) As the Bible may define it: Hate (do not tolerate) sin and evil; Love people. (see Romans 12:9-21)

Some other key questions to consider and discuss:

- 1) Is disagreement the same as intolerance? (see 1 Corinthians 1:10 - agree on what?)
- 2) Why is dialogue (open discussions and debate) important when it comes to differences of opinion on sensitive cultural matters such as sexual orientation, abortion or religious beliefs? (see Acts 17:17 - in what manner do we try and reason with one another?)
- 3) Can tolerance and open dialogue be of any value if there is no such thing as absolute truth (right and wrong over all of time, places and cultures)? (see Romans 1:29-31 - what happens without the gospel of truth?)
- 4) How does one describe a person or group that preaches tolerance but who are not tolerant to people with views other than their own; who treat them badly by causing them to get fired, calling them names, and denying them the freedom of expressing their points of view? (see Matthew 23:27-28)
- 5) How might we handle conversations with others of a different world-view (atheism, humanism, etc.) who are really NOT interested in open dialogue for purposes of seeking the truth? (see 1 Timothy 6:20-21)

Some things the Bible has to say about tolerance:

- ◆ Do we keep silent with evil or dangerous cultural beliefs and practices? (Ephesians 4:15)
- ◆ What do we do when a fellow believer does something wrong against us? (Matthew 18:15-17)
- ◆ Do we really have a sinful nature and how should we deal with that when we encounter a professing Christian who regularly behaves immorally? (Matthew 18:15-17; 1 Corinthians 5:1-13)
- ◆ Should our behavior be about winning the approval of others or of God? (Galatians 1:10)
- ◆ How do we deal with those who are lazy / idle or “busybodies?” Should we treat them as an enemy or address the issue with love and respect? (2 Thessalonians 3:10-15)
- ◆ Should we engage in, or avoid, foolish arguments, especially if it involves a divisive person? (Titus 3:9-10).
- ◆ Regardless of the different opinions we may have with others, is it ever OK to treat them with anything other than love? (see Romans 12:9-21 among many other Bible passages)

Questions for personal application:

- 1) How are you handling others with opinions different from yours? How might you do this better?
- 2) How can you help others to explore ideas different from their own, with decency and respect for one another?
- 3) When discussing our opinions and points of view, how does our “world-view” (how we view the world and ourselves) affect what we believe? Is there one true world-view? Can you support your answer?
- 4) In what way might our culture be discouraging free speech and open discussions with those having different opinions? What can and should we do about that as followers of Jesus Christ?

Our culture has been influencing the church.
It is time for the church to influence our culture!
